Preaching the Sunday Gospel

It occurred to me after having preached the recent Sunday gospels about Jesus bringing fire on the earth and his teaching that eternal life is enjoyed only by those striving to enter through the narrow gate, that the richness of these scriptures invites further reflection. In my homilies I spoke of the eternal fires of Hell and that simply by identifying yourself as being a Christian doesn't entitle you to heaven. Baptism is the sacrament that causes one to become Christian and is the gateway to salvation. Rather than being the end, baptism is the beginning. You must put into practice what Jesus teaches. I also echoed the words of Jesus when he said that we should strive to enter through the narrow gate, which means to vigorously work for the end goal of life which is heaven. What Jesus taught needs to be put into context with other of his teachings which indicated that being saved by him is a gift and that eternal life and heaven is in no way earned by anyone. Scripture passages, the Church teaches, like the ones to which I referred, are interpreted and understood within the context of the whole of scripture.

So, keep this in mind. When we read the scriptures chosen by the Church for a particular Sunday, she usually has a major lesson in mind to teach, a part of the whole of our salvation. It isn't practical to teach everything about Jesus saving us every Sunday all of the time. It would be mind-boggling, confusing, time consuming and disproportionate to our worship and the celebration of the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass. Rather, we consider the truths bit by bit for deeper and more fruitful meditation and personal appropriation. Considering the big picture when we have finished reading the planned scriptures for an entire year, we can put the parts together like individual patches on a quilt. Every patch, every teaching, has its place, and fits with the other teachings. When you look at the big picture, you can see the Truth and the constituents of the Truth. It not only makes sense, but there is a beauty in its harmony and simplicity. You can see God and know that his love pulses from everything that he teaches and how he puts salvation together for us.

Hear the Word of the Lord. Consider its parts, but look for the big picture of which the parts comprise.
